HEART CT SHOWS WHAT YOUR HEART CAN'T TELL YOU

It is a simple, non-invasive CT exam that evaluates the extent of calcified plaque buildup in the arteries of the heart. This can be an indicator of coronary artery disease (CAD). The higher the score, the higher the risk of a cardiac event. If you have CAD, you can make lifestyle changes or plan treatment options with your doctor.

WHO SHOULD HAVE A HEART CT SCAN?

The exam may be useful for women 45-70 years old and men 40-70 years old with any of these risk factors:

- Family history of heart disease
- Smoking
- High cholesterol
- Diabetes
- High blood pressure
- Excess weight

If you are experiencing heart symptoms or have a history of coronary artery disease, you should not have this exam. Talk to your doctor about your options.

HOW DO I PREPARE FOR THE SCAN?

Avoid caffeine and other stimulants for four hours before your appointment. The entire exam takes less than 15 minutes.

HOW DO I GET MY RESULTS?

Your ordering provider will receive the results and communicate with you. If your report warrants follow-up, your doctor will be able to use the information to determine a treatment plan that's right for you.
